

Re: Two upstream connections

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Mailing-Lists/Debian/2005-09/4065.html>

From: David Clymer (david_at_zettazebra.com)

Date: 09/30/05

To: debian-user@lists.debian.org

Date: Thu, 29 Sep 2005 22:03:28 -0400

On Thu, 2005-09-29 at 17:39 -0500, Tim wrote:

- > Does anybody have a simple script for two upstream connections?
- > I have ADSL as primary and wireless as backup. I don't need load
- > balance just an active/backup scenario (with automatic failover).
- > The DSL has dynamic IP via DHCP the wireless can use either static
- > IP or DHCP.
- >
- > The intranet runs NAT. I am running the 2.4.27-2-686 kernel. I also
- > do some port forwarding. I think iproute is what I need but all the
- > examples I've seen are overly complicated for what we need.

This question was posed and answered on this list a few days ago. You may find this thread helpful:

<http://lists.debian.org/debian-user/2005/09/msg03253.html>

-davidc

--

gpg-key: <http://www.zettazebra.com/files/key.gpg>

--

To UNSUBSCRIBE, email to debian-user-REQUEST@lists.debian.org with a subject of "unsubscribe". Trouble? Contact listmaster@lists.debian.org

- application/pgp-signature attachment: This is a digitally signed message part