Noobie stomps in, uses HTML mail (which you are **still** doing, and still breaking the Code Of Conduct) and tells us not to follow an internet standard, because no one else does it.

That's not appreciated.

Sorry for the previous html message, I though gmail used html only when messages contained extra formatting info, but it was not the case. Very sorry. Now it should be better...

It is indeed. Welcome to the our club. You might consider sorting d-u to its own folder as the large volume of mails can be difficult to handle otherwise.

If you ever start using gmail through pop/smtp search the archives for the issues that **will** arise. Unfortunately gmail's ways of handling mail are not very orthodox.
