About a year ago, there was a GR (general resolution) that Debian had and it said 'GFDL without invariant sections' are DFSG-free while 'GFDL with invariant sections' is not. Read info on the vote.

That's all fine and good, and I've been persuaded to see the Debian perspective on this. However, there would be fewer angry users if the package maintainers put the non-DFSG stuff into non-free `_before_` they excised it from main.
