Rockbox is not recommended, that entails completely replacing the iPod's software.

I have only heard good things about it from the LUG. But I suppose if you can pull it off without it I'd say rock on..

I have nothing against Rockbox, in fact once they support current gen iPods I'll definitely give it a shot. For one thing it supports a lot more cool features and formats than the default iPod software.

What I understand, from reading their website is that they don't support Gen4 Nanos ... and that's what I'm getting Trish. Do I understand correctly that Rhythmbox does a good job of syncing with the Nano?
