Because I had some difficulty with the full install of Core 6 the question is what is the likelihood of a successful upgrade straight from Core 3 to Core 6. So far it isn't looking that good. I booted up the Core 6 DVD started an upgrade and things stopped at the checking dependencies point. There was no appearance of the progress bar, after 30 minutes, nor did there seem to be any activity on he DVD drive.

I'm running FC6 on an Athlon 1.2 GHz, but I did an upgrade from FC5.

30 minutes may not be enough. You could try waiting longer, or doing a smaller install, followed by yum'ing the package groups you need. (After install, do "yum update yum", then "yum update", then "yum grouplist", then "yum groupinstall <available groups you want>".)

How much memory is in the machine? I have 512 MB. If you have less than 256 MB, be sure to do a text install.
