Hi folks

I have just finished down loading some books for a friends son to help him with his maths. They have arrived in .daa file, which is a compressed iso type of file. You get a .daa file and a .nfo file. Any ideas as to what program will burn them or convert them to a burning format that K3b will handle?

Google is your friend.....

<http://filext.com/file-extension/DAA>

Gives info about the file extension and

<http://www.fileinfo.net/extension/daa>

Tells you what you need to download.

Thanks Ed. I have used this software on windoz in the past. Just been to their site to see if there was a trial version, as its $30 a copy and guess what? I quote...

PowerISO for Linux -- This is a free utility for linux which can extract, list, and convert image files (including ISO, BIN, DAA, and other formats). Type " poweriso -? " for detailed usage information. File Size: 286KB Download Now

So I have, will give it a try later on after I have had some sleep
