I want to have the Gnome Archive Manager fired up automatically with the indicated file when I double-click on a tar, gz, zip or any other type of archive file.

However, for some reason this has stopped working recently, e.g. a dialog box is opened asking me to choose a program to run.

How can I fix this permanently?

Just checking... You have already tried changing the setting in Nautilus for that file type?

Software is not manufactured, it is something you write and publish. Keep Europe free from software patents, we do not want censorship by patent law on written works.

You do not examine legislation in the light of the benefits it will convey if properly administered, but in the light of the wrongs it would do and the harms it would cause if improperly administered.
