

Re: mixer_applet2 to system tray

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Mailing-Lists/GNOME/2008-01/msg00073.html>

- From: Olav Vitters <olav@xxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sun, 27 Jan 2008 22:45:54 +0100
-

On Sun, Jan 27, 2008 at 01:40:59PM -0800, Daniel Fetchinson wrote:

So I'm sufficiently confused as to what to expect. Is there a way to get mixer_applet2 run with any tray?

No, as it is an applet (unlike nm-applet).

But then why do I see the little volume control icon belonging to mixer_applet2 right next to the nm-applet icon on the system tray on this screenshot?

I only see 2 icons in the notification area. Network manager and some power management thing (guessing).

<http://www.gnome.org/projects/NetworkManager/images/wireless-at-tealuxe.png>

I'm assuming that the screenshot indeed shows the system tray and not the panel since nm-applet is on it.

A very small part of that screenshot shows the tray notification area (it is not 'system tray'). It is surrounded by a focus line (the dashes). Then you have some empty space (panel), then the volume applet, then the clock applet.

--
Regards,
Olav

gnome-list mailing list
gnome-list@xxxxxxxx
<http://mail.gnome.org/mailman/listinfo/gnome-list>