

How do you get your RHEL CDs?

---

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Mailing-Lists/RedHat/2007-06/msg00187.html>

---

- From: "Furnish, Trever G" <TGFurnish@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Thu, 21 Jun 2007 17:07:00 -0400
-

Anyone have a better solution for keeping CDs in house for the various flavors of RHEL than just downloading them and burning them? I need to keep local media for disaster recovery, for several sites, and lately it's become too much of a chore.

I HATE burning and labeling and testing CDs. And lately we seem to be in a transitional stage between 32-bit and 64-bit, between Intel and AMD, and between RHEL versions [345]. With all the variations, this is getting to be a problem, but Redhat wasn't very helpful when I asked how I could just buy CDs to accompany my RHN subscriptions. I checked a few of the fedora media vendors, like CheapBytes, but so far haven't found anyone providing RHEL on CD.

Yes, I'm aware I can get Centos from those vendors, but I have no interest in Centos -- I'm paying for RHEL for a reason. :-) And I'd be happy to pay for CDs if I could find them or talk Redhat into selling them.

--

Trever

--

redhat-list mailing list

unsubscribe <mailto:redhat-list-request@xxxxxxxxxx?subject=unsubscribe>
<https://www.redhat.com/mailman/listinfo/redhat-list>