Ok, we've decided that the black head circuitry is dead on our printer. Now, I like the Canon, esp the four separate cartridges (all < $15, OEM), so I'm leaning towards another Canon.

BIG consideration: it must have good support under Linux, since that's all I run. I'm looking at the CUPS printer database, but that won't tell me things like:

- how well it will last (I'm not happy at only 4 years)
- not too expensive (I'd prefer < $150)

And with this group, yes, I'm looking at an inkjet, and I loathe HP inkjets – pure crap.
