Most browsers can save images they're displaying separately and / or copy the URL used to retrieve that image to the clipboard so you can download it using curl or wget. In Mozilla and Firefox, both these functions are available via the context menu--right-click on the image to display that menu, which includes the commands "Copy Image Location" and "Save Image As...".

With FF, you could just do "Ctrl-S" -> select "Web page; complete". That'll save all the tiles in one operation.
