After following the recent thread about dolphin/konqueror file managers, I installed Krusader, and really like it.

My questions are:

1. Can Krusader be installed as the default file manager in KDE. That is, when I click on a file icon, it open in Krusader?
2. If it's possible to do so, is there a downside to making this change that I'm overlooking?

kcontrol > kde components > file associations under inode, change directory and system_directory to krusader.

i'm not aware of any downsides to making the change.

Hope that helps :)
