I am intrigued by the concept of 3 levels of firewall giving 5 firewalls, enlighten me on the math please?

It's a wireless ISP. He has fiber to his "office" where he has one firewall. Each "repeater" has it's own firewall. I'm three bounces from his "office". Then my own router has it's firewall. Last time I checked we were about 9 nano-seconds from the fiber [radio propagation speeds and all that]. The speed is better than DSL and Cable.
