

[opensuse] resolution in runlevel 3, weird startup, flash in firefox, ...

[opensuse] resolution in runlevel 3, weird startup, flash in firefox, ...

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Mailing-Lists/SuSE/2008-05/msg01419.html>

- From: Sergey Mkrtchyan <physwalker@xxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 16 May 2008 12:38:29 -0400
-

Hi List,

I've finally decided to try to figure out some of the problems I'm having :-)

I've opensuse 10.3 running on thinkpad t61, with compiz and all the updates. I have NVidia graphics card, and drivers are installed following the wiki. Now when I change to runlevel 3 (I guess) with Ctrl + F3 or something else, (or while booting) the screen looks stretched. I remember it used to be perfect, but after re-intsalling the system, it feels like installing NVidia drivers "didn't affect" that part.

Another thing which really annoys me, is that when I boot up, bunch of icons which should be right next to the clock, appear on the taskbar as opened windows. So what I see is basically, the same icons in separate windows (KNetwork Manager, Updater, KMix...) opened on the desktop and with the windows on the taskbar (I guess I screwed explaining how it looks like), I have to logout and log back for them to get back where they should be. Does anybody had anything similiar?

And also, this is a long time process, flash in firefox is really inconsistent, it works for some sites (for YouTube for example), but for others it doesn't work, showing only white frame (and most of the times it's like that). I have to manually copy the link to Konqueror. I have adblock installed for firefox, but I tried to disable it and try again, which didn't help :-)

I have also some problems with sound, first thing is that the buttons on the laptop for sound control doesn't work, and if I click on Kmix it shows headphones on the top of the slider, and slider is just not chaning the sound. I tried to change somwhow so that it doesn't show the headphones on the top, thinking that that might be the reason, but couldn't find how...

Sorry for the mess above, and thanks for any help!

Sergey

--

To unsubscribe, e-mail: opensuse+unsubscribe@xxxxxxxx

For additional commands, e-mail: opensuse+help@xxxxxxxx

[opensuse] resolution in runlevel 3, weird startup, flash in firefox, ...