

Re: How to keep date/time accurate

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/alt.os.linux.suse/2003-10/0745.html>

---

From: Sally Shears (sshears\_at\_theWorld.com)

Date: 10/08/03

Date: Tue, 07 Oct 2003 20:26:53 -0400

In article <bls0pu$dpm$05$1@news.t-online.com>, Cobra <mtcobra@gmx.de> wrote:

- > Created a file called gettime (or anything like that) in the /etc/init.d
- > folder with the following code in it. Activate gettime for runlevel 3 and 5
- > in the runlevel editor. Then the correct time will be set on startup.

...snip...

Thanks. Cobra. That would be good if the machine were rebooted frequently.

In this case, it's a server and is hardly ever rebooted. I think that makes the xntpd or netdate solutions better for me.

— Sally

--

Sally Shears (a.k.a. "Molly")
sshears@theWorld.com -or- Sally@Shears.org
<http://theWorld.com/~sshears>