

Re: Modem busy total newbie

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/alt.os.linux/2004-05/0047.html>

---

From: taff (taff\_at\_taffandiona.karoo.co.uk)

Date: 05/01/04

Date: Sat, 1 May 2004 13:52:08 +0100

that's right that's where it is in windows, I'm going to try your instructions and fingers crossed i can find my way around enough to get it right!

Cheers will post back with results

Taff

"Styvaen" <abuse@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:DIudnXhtI-XK-A7dRVn-jA@nildram.net...

> taff wrote:

>

>> Hi I'm a total newbie to Linux but want to give it a fair crack, got

>> Knoppix v3.3 yesterday burned it to a disk and it starts up fine only >> problem is my modem it's an Intel HaM v92.

>> when I try to query the modem on com port 3 I get a report saying that

>> "the modem is busy" has anyone any ideas what is going on ? and does this >> mean that it has at least found a usable modem?

>> thanks for reading

>> Taff

>

> Modem busy means that you are not getting any reply from your modem. Why do > you assume it is on com port 3? Is it because that is where it is assigned

> in windows?

>

> Run lspci as root and note down your modem's IRQ and PORT number. Next run

> setserial as follows.

>

> # setserial /dev/ttyS0

>

> You should get some output like:

> /dev/ttyS0, UART: 16550A, Port: 0x03f8, IRQ: 4

>

> This indicates the settings for your serial port that is com1 in windows.

>

> Now do setserial for ttyS1 to ttyS3. You are looking for a serial port with

alt.os.linux: Re: Modem busy total newbie

- > your modem's IRQ and PORT number. If you find it then you will know which
- > one to use to query your modem.
- >
- > If you don't find it then you will need to configure one of your
- > unused /dev/tty's
- >
- > For instance:
- >
- > # setserial /dev/ttyS0 port 0x1420 irq 10
- >
- > Note that you need to replace those values with your own.
- >
- > Styvaen.
- >