

Re: signal delivery

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.os.linux.development.system/2004-01/0369.html>

From: Kasper Dupont (kasperd_at_daimi.au.dk)

Date: 01/23/04

Date: Fri, 23 Jan 2004 06:38:21 +0100

Fong Tsui wrote:

- >
- > Does anybody know if there are multiple signals sent to the same
- > process at the same time, does linux system guarantees all signals got
- > delivered?

You can't have more than one pending signal of each type.

- >
- > I have a case that SIGPIPE and SIGTERM are sent to a process at the
- > same time.

In that case you are guaranteed that both will get delivered.
(Assuming the first signal doesn't kill the process.)

- > In the code, signals received are not certain, sometimes,
- > either one, sometimes none but never got both.

Could be a race condition in your code. Please post a minimal code example demonstrating the problem.

--

Kasper Dupont -- der bruger for meget tid paa usenet.
For sending spam use <mailto:aaarep@daimi.au.dk>
/* Would you like fries with that? */