It's just some st00pid spammer crapping in various newsgroups (I saw the spam in four Linux groups as well as a security newsgroup) trying to rip off fools. Passing some certification test might help getting past the HR idiots, but will not help much in any job interview – where the applicant won't have the first clue how to answer technical questions posed by the interviewer. That's also why we don't put a certification requirement in job postings, and rank down applicants who claim such certification. At best, they've memorized the material needed to pass some test which generally has no relevance to real world job needs.
