

Re: CPU info

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.os.linux.hardware/2005-10/0276.html>

From: Stefan Patric (not_at_thisaddress.com)

Date: 10/18/05

Date: Mon, 17 Oct 2005 22:51:32 -0700

On Mon, 17 Oct 2005 09:33:11 -0600, ray wrote:

> On Sun, 16 Oct 2005 22:54:08 -0700, Stefan Patric wrote:

>

>> On Fri, 14 Oct 2005 15:09:15 -0600, ray wrote:

>>

>>> On Fri, 14 Oct 2005 10:25:30 -0700, Stefan Patric wrote:

>>>

>>>> On Fri, 14 Oct 2005 09:18:03 -0600, ray wrote:

>>>>

>>>>> I'm looking at doing some computer replacements - I'm wondering if >>>>> anyone can either explain the differences of the multitude of Intel >>>>> and AMD CPUs currently available or point me to a definitive article.

>>>>

>>>> It might be more expedient for you to list your computer use >>>> requirements, and in return get CPU/motherboard recommendations and >>>> why.

>>>> Or tell us what you're using now, and why they (or it) are no longer >>>> useful. Or do a Google or Yahoo search.

>>>>

>>>> Stefan

>>>>

>>>> My wife's computer is a Compaq 7470 with 550mhz AMD K6-2 - I'm aiming >>>> to replace it because it's quite slow. I know people will suggest using >>>> a 'lighter' desktop (we're using KDE on it), but that's not an option >>>> for her. I'm also thinking about getting a new sub $1000 laptop. I'd >>>> still just like to know about the differences of the different Intel >>>> and AMD chips. It seems like about all I'm seeing on the AMD side right >>>> now are Sempron and AMD64 - so I'd like to know how a Sempron compares >>>> with a Celeron and a Celeron D or a P4. On the laptop, what's the >>>> difference among Sempron M and plain Sempron; Celeron Celeron M, >>>> Celeron D, P4 M, etc.

>>>>

>>>>

>g