

Re: Mandrake not being nice

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.os.linux.misc/2003-10/1938.html>

---

From: Kostatus (to.get.my.email_at_see.bottom.of.my.post)

Date: 10/13/03

Date: Mon, 13 Oct 2003 09:10:09 +0000 (UTC)

On Mon, 13 Oct 2003 05:31:59 GMT, Kostatus wrote:

My hardware:

AMD Athlon XP 1600+ processor

NVida GeForce2 MX 400 64MB graphics card (don't know which monitor though)

Intel V92 HaM Data Fax Voice modem (doesnt work, couldnt find any drivers)

And a basic sound card – doesn't work, don't even know where to set it up

My Epson Stylus C60 USB printer won't show up on auto-detect but it lets me add it manually, there I have a coice of 3 USB ports (I actually have 4 and they're not numbered). Neither one of them gives an error message but neither one of them works either.

My scanner is an ancient Mustek 1200ED (serial port)

Also, every time I access the CD Drive or open a folder off the desktop it gives me an error message that it could not find it, but opens it any way.

A pitty that it seems to be such a pain to set up / have the right hardware for, it seems so nice in all the other aspects that I've had time to explore! <Sigh>

--

Kostatus

kostatus001 at ihug co nz