

Re: configure problems

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.os.linux.setup/2004-10/0319.html>

From: Andreas Janssen (andreas.janssen_at_bigfoot.com)

Date: 10/10/04

Date: Sun, 10 Oct 2004 23:10:43 +0200

Hello

Morrison (<lycergic2003@hotmail.com>) wrote:

> My appologies for such a newbie questin, but, I'm not familiar with > this topic enough.. Iv just upgraded my linux – acctually reinstalled > on new system – version 9.

That version is actually quite old already. Is there still support for RH9? Maybe you want to switch to Fedora Core 2 or 3.

> *Now, back in ver 7, I was simply able to > run "configure" to setup new apps such as qpopper...
> now in ver 9, configure seems to be missing... i.e. $configure > configure: command not found.
>
> is it hiding somewhere? any help would be greatly appreciated.*

configure is not a system program, it comes with the source code. You should be able to call it using

`./configure`

(perhaps the current directory is not in the PATH). Maybe the source code does not have a configure script. Check the documentation, like the README and/or INSTALL files.

best regards

Andreas Janssen

--

Andreas Janssen <andreas.janssen@bigfoot.com>
PGP-Key-ID: 0xDC801674 ICQ #17079270
Registered Linux User #267976
<http://www.andreas-janssen.de/debian-tipps.html>