

linux.redhat: Re: Problem with getting Java to work :-(

Re: Problem with getting Java to work :-(

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/linux.redhat/2004-03/0549.html>

From: Skunkie (skunkie_at_HAHAHAHA.com)

Date: 03/15/04

Date: Mon, 15 Mar 2004 18:51:12 +0000

I had the same problem getting J2RE to work with mozilla until I found this site <http://fedora.artoo.net/faq/#Java>. Follow this link for winXP.

I hope this helps, it sure worked for me!!

:)

Eurig Jones wrote:

- > Hi, I hope someone can help me!
- > here is my setup:
- >
- > Computer 1: Linux Redhat 9 (Athlon) with an Alcatel Speedtouch 330 ADSL
- > modem connecting as a static IP address to the internet
- >
- > Computer 2: Windows XP Pro (Athlon) connecting to the internet over a simple
- > network to Computer 1's network card. then using IP Masquerading to access
- > the internet.
- >
- > This works fine! I can access the internet using both computers.
- >
- > But I need java to be working through both browsers (desperately!!)
- > ...so I tried to get java plugin working on my netscape or my mozilla on
- > Computer 1...
- >
- > I made a symbolic link from java's libjavaplugin_oji.so to netscape's plugin
- > directory and the same for the mozilla plugin directory
- >
- > so I left that and tried a java applet through Internet Explorer on Computer
- > 2 and I couldn't use java through the browser there either! (but I could
- > before if I connected Computer 2 directly to the internet by itself using
- > the ADSL modem using the standard winxp drivers)
- >
- > Does anyone have any clue why I can't use java on either computers!? even
- > one of them would be nice :-)
- >
- > thanks in advance for your help!
- > Eurig
- >

Re: Problem with getting Java to work :-(

linux.redhat: Re: Problem with getting Java to work :-(

>