

linux.redhat: Re: Problem with getting Java to work :-(

Re: Problem with getting Java to work :-(

Source: <http://linux.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/linux.redhat/2004-03/0550.html>

From: Skunkie (skunkie_at_HAHAHAHA.com)

Date: 03/15/04

Date: Mon, 15 Mar 2004 18:52:02 +0000

Oppssssss winXP site is here..... <http://java.com/en/index.jsp>

:)

Skunkie wrote:

> I had the same problem getting J2RE to work with mozilla untill i found > this site <http://fedora.artoo.net/faq/#Java>. Follow this link for winXP.

>

> I hope this helps, it sure worked for me!!

>

> :)

>

> Eurig Jones wrote:

>

>> Hi, i hope someone can help me!

>> here is my setup:

>>

>> Computer 1: Linux Redhat 9 (Athlon) with an Alcatel Speedtouch 330 ADSL

>> modem connecting as a static IP address to the internet

>>

>> Computer 2: Windows XP Pro (Athlon) connecting to the internet over a >> simple >> network to Computer 1's network card. then using IP Masquerading to >> access

>> the internet.

>>

>> This works fine! i can access the internet using both computers.

>>

>> But I need java to be working through both browsers (desperately!!)

>> ...so I tried to get java plugin working on my netscape or my mozilla on

>> Computer 1...

>>

>> i made a symbolic link from java's libjavaplugin_oji.so to netscape's

>> plugin

>> directory and the same for the mozilla plugin directory

>>

>> so I left that and tried a java applet through Internet Explorer on

>> Computer

Re: Problem with getting Java to work :-(

linux.redhat: Re: Problem with getting Java to work :-(

>> 2 and I couldn't use java through the browser there either! (but I could >> before if i connected Computer 2 directly to the internet by itself using >> the ADSL m